I am a criminologist with a background in social statistics. My teaching and research focus on statistical modelling, sensitivity analysis, disparities in the criminal justice system, crime prevention, and road violence. Through my work, I aim to foster critical thinking among new generations of graduates and to promote criminal justice, crime prevention, and road safety policies and practices that are firmly grounded in the best available evidence.

Professional Experience

2023–today	Professor in Quantitative Criminology, *University of Leeds
